ISAAC H. JULIAN, Editor.

SAN MARCOS, TEXAS.

SATURDAY, FEB. 7.

(Entered as Second-Class Matter at the Postoffice at San Marcos, Texas.)

TO ADVERTISERS.

THE FREE PRESS is a leading newspaper and advertising medium, and has the best office between the Colorado and San Antonio rivers. Circulates also generally, both South and North. A live paper, devoted to immigration and the development and progress of the country. Jeffersonian Democratic in politics. Only and official paper of the county. San Marcos, the county seat, is a growing town of some 1,200 inhabitants, located on the great highway and stage route from Austin, via San Antonio to Mexico, on the line of the International Railroad which has been completed to Austin, the capital of the State, only thirty miles distant, and it is confidently anticipated will soon be extended to this place. It is noted for its religious and educational privileges, and as the center of a fine country and excellent community; also for the celebrated springs, half a mile above, which boil up from the bowels of the earth at the foot of the mountains, forming the San Marcos river, and constituting at once a great natural curiosity and an inexhaustible water power.

Advertising agents, and advertisers generally throughout the country, will be apt to recognize in the proprietor of the Free Press one with whom, as a newspaper publisher of Eastern Indiana during fourteen years, from September 1858 to December 1873, they have probably had business transactions, to which he can point them with pleasure as the best evidence of his responsibility and mode of doing business.

See table of advertising rates on first page.

FOR PRESIDENT:

SAMUEL J. TILDEN,
OF NEW YORK.

Subject to the decision of the National Democratic Convention.

NATL. of Austin, charged with murder, was tried at Georgetown and acquitted.

THE Grant boom is clearly subsiding. We have always had a good degree of faith, that the good sense of the American people would puncture that bubble.

The interesting article on our first page, on "The Literature of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky," is from the pen of Benj. S. Parker, editor of the New Castle, Indiana, Mercury, himself a poet of distinction, and who deserves special credit for the interest he manifests in the literature of the Ohio valley.

A GENTLEMAN who has returned from a trip through Missouri and Kansas represents that the colored people who emigrated to that country from the south are dying by the hundreds of pneumonia. The climate is too rigorous, and while those who have always lived in that latitude do not appear to be affected by the cold, the poor southern negroes suffer most terribly. Even if they could get employment, they could not work in the winter on account of the cold, unless they find something to do in doors.—[San Antonio Express.

Mr. Curtis on the "Strong Man" Question.

There is no more intolerable and un-republican nonsense than the talk of the necessity of a "strong man" in the Presidential chair. It is the cry of distrust in American institutions. It is a cry welcome to those who despise a republic and disbelieve in it. What we need is not the government of a strong man, but of a strong people, that is, of a people strong in their loyalty to law, strong in their faith in free popular institutions, strong to maintain every bulwark of liberty and the republic which the experience of a century and the example of our best and wisest patriots have created. Our government cannot be "stronger" than it is without ceasing to be a popular government. There is no necessity for the Republican party to make the only nomination which would arouse an indignant protest against the theory that any citizen is essential to the safety of the country, and that the soundest conservative rules and traditions must be overthrown in order to put the executive power into his hands.—[Harper's Weekly.

Ingersoll on Paine.

CHICAGO, Jan. 20.—New Music hall was crowded to its utmost capacity to-night, the audience having assembled to hear Col. Robert G. Ingersoll lecture on "Thomas Paine, his life and services to his country." He touched briefly on the theological side of Paine's character and dwelt for nearly two hours on his distinguished ability and patriotism as displayed during our troubles with Great Britain. Proceeds of the lecture which are to be applied to a monument to Paine, were about $1,500, besides which a subscription was taken for the same object. The monument will be placed in one of the parks.

Compositors are the most gentlemanly and self-contained of men. They never want a finger in the pie.

The man who tried to run a newspaper to suit everybody, died in an eastern poorhouse eighty years ago.

Is Abuse Argument?

The San Marcos FREE PRESS heists the name of Samuel J. Tilden for President, and in a column introduction make an honest democrat blush to the back of his neck. This pure patriot, says the FREE PRESS, would take rank among the first Presidents of the country—"a man of broad views, calm self-possession, honest and inflexible in his purposes." Now, on the contrary, the Tribune regards slippery Sam as a thief, a man unfit to control the destinies of this country as any one of the returning board rascals who counted him out at the last election.—Orange (Tex.) Tribune.

"Tis a dirty bird that defouls its own nest," says the old adage. The Orange Tribune in the above writes itself down in that category. Its managers, as democrats, we presume no doubt supported Tilden in 1876, and have asserted—as indeed they do above—that he was fairly elected and unjustly counted out. They do not pretend to have had any new revelation as to Tilden's character, yet they now adopt the billingsgate or the Grant organs against him, and all so far as appears, without any reason whatever! In so doing they most effectively stultify and dishonor themselves only.

Tilden stands far above their reach. We gave our reasons for again supporting Mr. Tilden. They seem to us perfectly unanswerable, at least by such as supported him before. The Tribune does not attempt an answer, but runs off into personal abuse as above.

"To argue with a man who has renounced the use and authority of reason," says another pithy authority, "is like administering medicine to the dead, or trying to convert an atheist by Scripture." Therefore we decline any extended response to the Orange Tribune. We suggest to it, however, the propriety of "going slow," because the chances are that it will yet have to support Tilden after all, or some one on whom his mantle shall fall, and after abusing him so roundly it might add, if possible, to the awkwardness and humiliation of its present position.

We have said we shall not attempt to reason with the Tribune. The Groesbeck New Era however, we notice has done so, and we copy its handsome and crushing rejoinder below:

The Orange Tribune, usually fair in discussing men and measures, flies off at a tangent at the mere mention of Tilden's name in connection with the next presidency by a contemporary, and calls him a "thief." Now Bro. Harris if you are able to give a reason for the faith that is in you, just tell us when and where Samuel J. Tilden ever stole anything from anybody. Why is it that Democrats and Democratic newspapers will chime in with the Radicals in traducing the fair name of the only man who has led the Democratic party to victory within a score of years, is beyond our comprehension. No, Tilden is not a thief. He has a record of which any man might justly be proud. He possesses in a very eminent degree the elements of a statesman, a philosopher, a leader, and in the opinion of a large and intelligent body of democrats, whose opinions are not to be ignored in the coming contest, Samuel J. Tilden will, if he is not nominated, Tilden's name is a tower of strength in the Democratic party. Those who would ignore him dare not do it. The Democracy has many able men in its ranks, but where is one of superior strength and commanding genius, who has ever united the party on any measure? We challenge the Tribune to point out a single one. We have a number of third and fourth rate statesmen, who crowd around in local circles and get up a meagre following, but away from their own dingy hills they are not known. About all the purpose they serve in the Democratic ranks is to divide, distract, and get up schisms. Now and then one of them discovers that he would make a good president, and immediately he is an uncompromising foe of Tilden. His followers imitate the spirit and war is declared against the sage of Grammercy Park. The most senseless, brainless thing imaginable is the war on Tilden, especially the Democratic part of it. The Era is not the champion of Mr. Tilden, on the contrary, we are opposed to his nomination, if his equal as a leader can be found anywhere else, but, the position he occupies in the democratic party and in the mind of the whole country, would it appears, suggest justice and fairness in handling his name, if no higher considerations prompted it. The insidit of no man is of any value in such a case. We want proof of his unworthiness and demand its production, before engaging in a war of extermination after the fashion of Kilkenny cats.

If you want an honest, good man, Julian, call out General Hancock.—Orange Tribune.

Thank you for condescending to enlighten us. Yes, Hancock we reckon is a fair sort of a man. But as some one has said, the lieutenant would be nowhere in a contest with his chief (Grant), supposing the latter should run. And besides the country has had enough of military men for President. Let us have a civilian and a statesman. And as such has Tilden a peer in the Democratic party or the Nation to day? If so, we confess we have not heard of him.

More than twenty years ago the New York Ledger published a story entitled "The Gunmaker of Moscow," and advertised it in every paper in the United States. It is now republishing the same.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
Jan. 28, '80.

Senator Coke makes, in his recent speech against Senator Bayard's resolution, the point that we cannot take away the legal tender quality of the greenback issued as legal tender because they are a part of the National debt and therefore their validity is protected by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution. That amendment provides that the validity of the public debt shall not be questioned.

The point was not discussed freely but rather evaded by Senator Bayard in his elaborate speech in support of his resolution yesterday. Senator Bayard's speech, by the way, was an able and excellent one, but fell without apparent effect upon the Senate. I think there is little doubt now that the resolution, as well as all other financial propositions, will go over for action at a later session.

The possible exception is the refunding bill, but even on the several measures relating to that there is a strong feeling in favor of delay.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs yesterday reported a bill to correct the record in case of General Fitz John Porter. All the members of the Committee agreed except General Logan, who took the novel ground that Congress as a Legislative body could not reverse the action of a Court Martial. But as General Burnside and all the other members of the Committee heartily support the bill, which is the amended House bill with a few small changes, there is no doubt it will pass—probably receiving every vote in the Senate except Logan's, and nine-tenths of all the votes thrown in the House.

The House, as is known, has been for weeks laboring or loafing over its amended rules. The Senate has been waiting for the House. Those amended rules are greatly preferable to the present ones—briefer, clearer, and less in number. The public business could be transacted under them with much more rapidity than under those now in force.

But the practical man asks if the whole of a session is to be consumed in adopting the rules, would it not be better to have an extra session for that purpose?

With a majority of both Houses in favor of adjournment as early as May, and every condition of benefit to the country and of political expediency for both parties urging such an early adjournment it is strange that the rules are not at once adopted, rejected, or put over for later consideration.

It is likely that two Commissions will be authorized by the present Congress—one to inquire into the needed changes in the tariff laws, and the other on the subject of the alcoholic traffic. Very numerous petitions in both cases have been received from prominent people in every section of the country.

The Injustice of It

Senator Bayard, in his elaborate argument in favor of withdrawing the legal-tender quality from greenbacks, asserts that it "can do injustice to no man, and cannot lessen the value of notes in the hands of any holder, because an equivalent for face value is offered in gold and silver coin in case any creditor should refuse to accept them." This is true, but it is of little importance. The objection to the Bayard proposition to demonetize greenbacks is not that it would impair their value, but that it is part of a scheme to diminish the quantity of available money in circulation and thereby to benefit those whose wealth consists of money and credits at the expense of the debtor class. To demonetize greenbacks would ultimately force their retirement. Next would follow the arrest of the coinage of silver—leaving us only gold and national bank notes to measure values and to make transactions with. Is it not evident that in this case the value of money would go up and the value of other things go down, and that it would be more difficult to pay debts? Suppose the present Congress should pass a law requiring the retirement of the $326,000,000 national bank notes; this would not lessen the value of such notes in the hands of holders, any more than the demonetization of greenbacks would lessen their value in the hands of holders; but suppose Senator Bayard should get rid of the $348,000,000 greenbacks and the $326,000,000 national bank notes and stop the coinage of silver, leaving the country nothing but gold as the measure of values and the agent of paying debts—would not this be a great wrong to all who owe obligations, by artificially doubling the difficulty of discharging them?

The Delaware senator forgets that a majority of the people of the United States are debtors. He represents a creditor constituency, and he resolutely refuses to recognize the interests and rights of the other class.—St. Louis

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Spermatorrhoea, or Gonorrhea, Involuntary Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife, pointing out a mode of cure so simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.

Lectures should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, post paid, on receipt of six cents or two postage stamps.
